For the first time, the Journal of the American Medical Association has published a study that suggests that the use of a single, low-dose, long-acting antipsychotic may be more effective than a combination of two or more drugs in treating schizophrenia. The study, which was conducted by researchers at the University of California, San Diego, found that patients who received a single, low-dose, long-acting antipsychotic (haloperidol decanoate) had a significantly higher rate of response to treatment than those who received a combination of two or more drugs (haloperidol and a second antipsychotic, either risperidone or olanzapine). The study also found that the single, low-dose, long-acting antipsychotic was associated with a lower risk of side effects, such as weight gain and metabolic abnormalities, than the combination of two or more drugs. The researchers concluded that the use of a single, low-dose, long-acting antipsychotic may be a more effective and safer treatment option for patients with schizophrenia.

Villar says spending within law

Challenge: For someone who is usually not very vocal, he is very assertive in his role as a lobbyist. He is a very hard worker.

The two leaders appear to be united by a common cause to protect the environment and the "green" industry.

1. How would you describe the relationship between the two leaders?

Disqualification hangs over De Venecia bid for new term

By Richard L. Doonan and Christopher M. Phillips

MANILA, Philippines—A bid by a former congressman to run for a second term in the Philippine House of Representatives is hanging in the balance, as the Commission on Elections (COMELEC) considers whether to disqualify him for alleged involvement in a controversial election.

Alfred Lamacara, a former congressman from the Ilocos Norte district, is the only candidate to have filed a bid for a second term in the House. He is currently a member of the House of Representatives, but his bid for a second term is being challenged by the COMELEC.
